

NAFTA promotes jobs, higher wages, lower prices and keeps America energy independent.

NAFTA has accrued substantial economic benefits for America's working class with job creation in the agriculture and manufacturing sector, greater access to affordable products and food, and lower energy bills due to America's energy independence and decreased reliance on foreign oil. Efforts to modernize NAFTA for the 21st Century should be pursued by policymakers to ensure fair and balanced trade that continues to benefit American exporters, consumers and helps create and grow American jobs.

Since its implementation in 1994, NAFTA has helped support over 43 million American jobs

NAFTA has resulted in bigger paychecks, lower prices and better products for American consumers

American farmers have exported over $43 billion of their products grown and produced in the United States to Mexico and Canada

NAFTA has paved the way for America to export billions of dollars worth of energy to Mexico and Canada, uphold America's energy independence and help support tens of millions of jobs

Only President Trump has the ability to pursue a modernized NAFTA framework that fits a 21st Century American economy
